WM. JOHNSON & SON.

By Ben H. Thomas.

It is almost incomprehensible, but nevertheless a fact, that within three blocks of the principal business thoroughfare of Pensacola there was, until about four months ago, a typical semi-tropical jungle, inhabited by raccoons, possums, rabbits, lizards and venomous reptiles. Such a jungle was in the heart of St. Michael's cemetery, the second oldest burying ground in the United States, and for upwards of forty years the foot of man had not trod the ground consecrated to the last repose of early Pensacolians. So dense was the growth that massive tombs were as completely buried from sight as if they had never existed, and this within a hundred feet of oft traveled paths in the northern, or more modern portion of the cemetery.

tomb was disclosed, rich in intricate carving from base to finial. Carved pilasters grace each of the four corners and the massive cap and finial is the work of a master in the art of sculpture. On the western end of this handsome structure is the following inscription:

Sacred
To the Memory of
JOHN HUNT.
A native of Huntsville, N. C.
Born March 2, 1801.
Died in New Orleans
Feb. 3, 1851.

The Hunt family is well known throughout the southern states and many of the ancestors of the occupant of this tomb are residents of Gulf Coast cities, some being in Mobile and a number residing in New Orleans, with which city they are prominently identified.

The tomb of John Hunt is built in

The slab lies flat upon the ground and is almost buried from sight in the long grass and weeds. On it is the following inscription:

GIDIEN KING,
Died
In Pensacola
Nov. 15, 1857.
By the Explosion of
The Steamer
Tom Thumb
Aged 24 years.

The steamer Tom Thumb was hardly larger than the big launches of the present day, but it was the first steam vessel used as a tow boat in the harbor of Pensacola. The boat was used principally in towing lumber and logs

Charles Evans. The grave is marked by a simple slab upon which is engraved:

Hon. Charles Evans,
Died Jan. 31, 1856.

Not far from this is a brick vault with marble slab on top bearing the following inscription:

Miss Winifred Evans,
Born in Montgomery Co.,
State of North Carolina,
July 8, 1790.
Died in Pensacola
Dec. 19, 1842.

Typical of the style of olden Spanish memorial architecture, are the Gonzalez and Moreno mausoleums which face Alcaniz street in the south-to vessels taking cargo in the bay and was engaged in this work when the explosion occurred. King, who was the only one killed was in the first room of the vessel when the accident occurred and was scalded to death by live steam. The accident occurred a short distance out in the bay, almost directly off the foot of Palafox street.

Reminder of the Scourge.

A reminder of the fearful yellow fever scourge of 1867 is an iron memorial set in cement a short distance in the old cemetery from the west gate. On this is the simple inscription:

Captain
Christian Pharo
Ship Gertrude,
Died Sept. 1867.

By the side of this is a similar iron memorial upon which is the words:

Stryman
Gunner Andersen
Ship Gertrude,
Died Sept. 1867.

During the yellow fever epidemic in 1867 a hospital occupied the site of the present Thiesen Building, and numerous cases were treated there. It was in this hospital that Pharo and Andersen passed away.

An Early Mayor.

The graves of several of Pensacola's old time mayors are to be found in St. Michael's, one of which is that of Hon.

Liver and Kidneys

It is highly important that these organs should properly perform their functions.

When they don't, what lameness of the side and back, what yellowness of the skin, what constipation, bad taste in the mouth, sick headache, pimples and blotches, and loss of courage, tell the story.

The great alternative and tonic

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Gives these organs vigor and tone for the proper performance of their functions, and cures all their ordinary ailments. Take it.

ern part of the cemetery, in both of which the old mission style is strictly adhered to. In the Moreno vault for several years reposed the mortal remains of Hon. Stephen Russell Mallory, but the body has been removed to the Mallory plot near the northeast corner of the cemetery and now rests, with that of his wife, under a massive granite monument upon which is engraved:

Stephen Russell Mallory,
Born on the Island of Trinidad, W. I.
U. S. Senator from Florida 1852-1861
Secretary of the Navy of the Confederate States of America 1861-1865.
Died in Pensacola Nov. 9, 1873.

On a simple shaft near the edge of what, until recently, was a jungle, is the inscription:

Chester P. Knapp,
Born at Woodbury, Conn.
July 31, 1814.
Died at Pensacola
Dec. 23, 1865.

Before the war Mr. Knapp operated a large mercantile business on Palafox street, and resided on Intendencia street between Baylen and Barcelona. He was well off in this world's goods, and during the war accumulated a large amount of Confederate money. It is related of him, by one who claims to have been present, that, at the close of the great strife, he rolled a barrel full of Confederate money out into the street in front of his residence, knocked in the head and scattered it to the winds of heaven. A man passing at the time offered to trade Mr. Knapp a load of wood for a load of Confederate paper, but the offer was spurned with disgust.

Old St. Michael's is replete with historical interest, and is daily the mecca of many tourists who take delight in reading the quaint inscriptions and gazing upon the earthly resting place of hundreds who have preceded them into the presence of the Master.

Can't look well, eat or feel well with impure blood feeding your body. Keep the blood pure with Burdock Blood Bitters. Eat simply, take exercise, keep clean and you will have long life.

THE TOMB OF JOHN HUNT.

the old portion of St. Michael's, but stone's throw from the magnificent monument. Until the was cut away last fall buried so completely as and creepers that was known to but ad seen it forced single on hands of the iron dented, even perfect idea ly unable scription. y clear marble a manner far superior to work of the present day, being put together wholly with heavy copper rivets and screws and all joints are fitted with a nicety that has defied the storms of winter and the fierce heat of the southern sun for over half a century. It is enclosed in a double iron fence and, although neglected for years, is still one of the most beautiful pieces of work in ancient St. Michael's cemetery.

An Early Tragedy.

A grim tragedy of the days before the war is recorded upon a slab in the western central part of the cemetery.
